Title: Seekers of the Wisp

Author: Conference Notes

Our first bit of information that we have been developing is from alternative future possibilities. Much of how we understand the Wisps comes from this information. There are a creature from a dimension called, Xornite. Which is somehow above all our shards. The creatures are concerned only with what seems to be information.

The creatures themselves may prove to become allies if we can offer them something they need. We could perform some sort of "transaction". But they are not interested in just anything. It has to either directly effect them or is of some importance to their ruling council. Britianas greatest seers still do not recognize them as a powerful force. If they were to ally themselves with the dangerous creatures of the land, things would be quite bad for our land. We are now attempting to find objects of information to trade with them. Before another evil occurs. I suggest to everyone here to pass that information on, before it's too late. A greater evil is coming... we know this. I would also know like to talk about the actual creature the wisp. There are many of them across the land... but it may and all things are pointing to the fact that it is "one" singular creature., It's wisp like apperience is only how we precieve it to look like. Imagine a creature with many arms living above a planet. The arms all reach into a certain area, and gather information for the singular creature.

*something once written seems scratched out*

There are many that claim that the world is either flat or spherical. This is not the case. I feel that my theory shows not only that the world is indeed magical and therefore not a true world per se but is infact in the shape of a doughnut. If one were to travel on a ship along the northern latitudes they would eventually return to the same point where they started. This holds true for all latitudes and longitudes of travel. However.. what we find is that the distance at any latitude or longitude is the same... by this evidence the world cannot be spherical, nor square nor flat. If you take a normal cloth map of the world and match the points where one would leave the map and where you would return to the map should you be travelling you will find that north goes into south and west into east, etc. Should you match these points on a map so that they touch, you would form first a cylinder from north and south points then curve them together to make a doughnut or wheel shape.

This then is the shape of our world based on empirical evidence. What this means is uncertain other than this is not a natural world.
Greetings friends! Here's what be certain: The "Wisps" are a manifestation of a single being, this -self- provides for -others- in its own universe. These -other-beings which share the -wisp's- "home," are in fact either the "upper class" or an order of creature that may perhaps "feed" on -new-knowledge?? Regardless of this, I postulate that the wisps whom we interact in yonder forest, are more as to the drones of the hive! either interspecies (?) roles or as symbiotic compatriots? Is it a "higher" consciousness? Or part of their culture!?

The Following is Anceint Wisp Dialouge kept in the Archives of the Montor Librarium:
I quote a wisp dialog from legend:

"Name?"
"Highest probabilities indicate that a manifestation from the Xorinite dimension will be called 'Wisp' by the entities known as 'humans'. I am also called
'Xorinia' by other manifestations of the Xorinite dimension."

"The Undrian Council seeks information.... Indeed! And who or what (?) makes up the Udrian Council???

Here's more of what Wisp have been legended to say:

"Job?"

"'Xorinia' is a conduit for information between different planes and dimensions. 'Xorinia' also catalogs information which is necessary for growth of the Xorinite community. Unquote.

As in..... feeding perhaps?? Speech oops
"'Xorinia' has digested information about 'The Guardian' and can state the following facts: "'The Guardian' possesses qualities which human entities label 'vain',
'greedy', 'egocentric', and
'malevolent'. 'The Guardian' thrives on power and domination. 'The Guardian' takes 'pleasure' from conquering other worlds.
His sensory organs are now focused on 'this' dimension known as 'Britannia'." Yet this wisp goes on to break it's rule of neutrality by a vested interest (?) or perhaps guilt (?) and warns the Avatar that the Guardian means to wipe out all of Britannia...

The Wisp shows foresight, either in that it knows Britannia will hold less "information" or it experiences the virtue of compassion (!?)... Thus explaining why "Xorinia" will try to save the "underdog" in forest battle. Yet... note the strange suspicion one has, as a human may put it... of the "Wisps" being some travelling salesman!!

"Although 'Xorinia' does not normally seek to influence actions of others, 'Xorinia' warns 'you' that if 'The Guardian' enters 'this' dimension, it will be the end of the dimension known as 'Britannia'. 'The Guardian' is powerful in 'his' own dimension. In 'your' dimension, 'he' will be unstoppable. The Undarian council sincerely hopes this information is useful. Transaction complete." Unquote.

Further Notes:

Wisps have been known to do "unusual" things.

We have had many reports of them aiding in unfair battles
